

September 1 2008

Last section of roof being shingled

Flashing the chimneys

Both boys at the peak

View from the road

Deer hoof marks in a brick

Beavers are building a dam

In the Bayfield River at the house

Night shift starts at twilight

View from a bedroom window

Canadian Beavers

Venting the roof area

Not a beaver – it's the plumber!

Toilet flange and their mess

“J.C.” waits for the girls to come home from school

The yard has been cleaned up

Across the road, back at the bush is where the old brickyard was located

In the area where the dead tree is located in the center of the photo

Simon checks out a century old door at our house

Plumber arrives with his stuff

Bradley builds a closet

Upstairs hallway

Northwest corner (upstairs)

Northeast corner (upstairs)

Girls bathroom (straight ahead)

Another closet (upstairs)

Towards the Bayfield River

Ever so much lumber!

Dave is pondering I think

Bradley's finished the closet

Dave is still pondering (children)

How do you fit heating ducts around a spiral staircase?

High water eroding the Beaver dam

Night shift will repair the damage

Flashing the chimneys

Dale Miller the Plumber

Roughing in the plumbing

Sunset at Bayfield

Water is higher, dam is flooded

Soda blaster arrives for cleanup

Cleaning the friezeboard area

Up to the peak on the south side

My boys have left, cloud of dust

Square bricks for the hearth, clean the bricks with hoof marks

North end is cleaned

Great afterglow tonight

Ductwork supplies

Roxul insulation

Double sink vanity top for the girls

“ DNS “ Miller

Ductwork in the old house

Left across the living room

Various supplies to be used

Starting deck framing

Beams are in, joists started

Cast iron floor registers

Laundry plumbing rough-in

Stuff on top of stuff – everywhere!

An Easter Lily has decided to bloom on September 12 2008

