

December 1 2008 – coming to work

1860 pine flooring being installed

“RJ” the electrician

Coming out from the wall

London Marble workstation

I'm starting the front entrance

New oak sill

Steve inspects the transom hole

Original 1843 transom (cut down)

Temporarily set in place

1860 Dining room door installed

Rick's tool station (& lunch pail)

New garage door installed

Simon waiting on my stuff at the door (perhaps a visit outside?)

1843 sidelight being trimmed to fit

Complete with new edging

An 1860 panel being modified for electrical light switches by RJ

Rick's workstation in Steve's office

The boys are halfway across the Great Room floor

1860 passageway panels

148 year old dirt being removed

More salvaged casings

Sidelight installed

“Brother Rick” trims the door

Original 1843 entrance panels

Testing the fit of the office door

1843 – Can they be salvaged?

Refinished cast iron tub on site

Master Bath shower installed

New vanity top

Bath Master did the tub

One toilet ready to use

Cleaned up, framed to fit

Right side up and in the opening.

Almost finished the kitchen area

Rick moves into Kay's office

Space left for under the island

“J.C.” inspects the progress

Trim for the right panel

Trim for the left panel

An 1860 pine floorboard had been trimmed with an adze to fit

Cleaning up after installation

Dusty business

“J.C.” doesn’t like dirty paws!

1860 panels into the Pantry

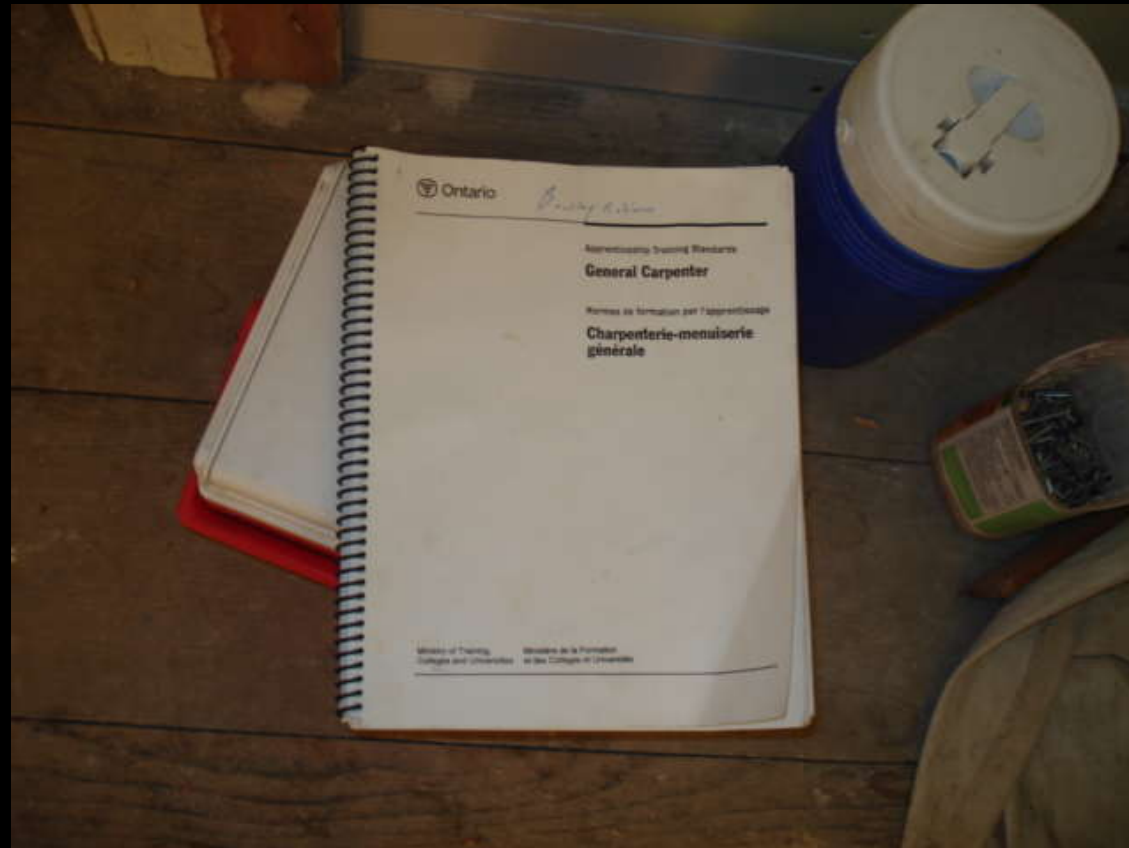

From the kitchen area

Bradley heads back to school to finish is Carpentry License

Original stone basement area

Rock elm beams overhead

Walls studded for insulation

Basement window still unfinished

View to the new basement

1843 wood blocking in the brick

Blocking attached for trim

More blocking for trim

The blocking has to be tapered to fit over uneven brickwork

Ever wider across the top

Tapered on the side so the trim will be plumb

Wherever Rick works you'll find his lunch pail (just in case!)

Argiope spider (female) – no, not at “The Farm” but at a cottage south of Bayfield
